

DISCLOSURE STATEMENT: CATHERINE TUCKER

This is a public disclosure statement.¹ Please also see my CV.²

I have received grants from DARPA, Google, the MIT CryptoEconomics Lab, the National Science Foundation, National Institute for Health, the Sloan Foundation, Tilburg Law and Economics Center, Time Warner, the Net Institute, WPP, the Marketing Science Institute,³ and the Computer & Communications Industry Association.⁴

I have received data from multiple firms including General Motors, Visible Measures, Havas Digital, and WPP.

I consulted for ADT, Amazon, Bausch Health, BMI, CBS, Chevron, Choice Hotels, ContextLogic, Energizer, Instacart, Intercontinental Group, Google, NCAA, Match Group, Marriott, Meta, Microsoft, Mu Sigma, Lyft, Paynerd, Reynolds and Reynolds, Ripple, RTIC, Samsung, Salesforce, SoundExchange, Twitter, UMG Recordings, Union Pacific Railroad Company, United Health Group, Verizon, Walmart, Warner Brothers, Yardi, and Yahoo. I am an academic affiliate at the Analysis Group, which is an economics consulting firm.

My academic advisors from my PhD at Stanford have also worked at multiple companies. These include Susan Athey (who was chief economist at Microsoft and is served on the boards of Ripple, Rover and Expedia), Steve Tadelis (who was chief economist at eBay), Tim Bresnahan who was Chief Economist at the DOJ, and Pat Bajari, who is currently chief economist at Amazon. My classmate at Stanford, Peter Coles, was previously chief economist at AirBnB.

I hold shares in individual companies that track the VHYAX index. The rest of my investments are in passive index tracker funds and municipal bonds.
